Sheridan's Mode of Fighting. Every master of battle tactics has a favorite mode of fighting, varied, of course, by circumstances, and especially by the wary dispositions | CHAS. B. COTTON, of the enemy. A study of Sheridan's campaigns will, we think, disclose the peculiarity of his COL. H. DENT, very readily. His success has been most brilliant; the secret of it is very simple. In the first | REV. D. P. HENDERSON, place, as we are told by an enthusiastic private, just home from the wars, "Phil. Sheridan fights to win." Other generals manœuver, and try to GEO. P. DOERN, outwit the enemy-to excel in defensive battles; the offensive of such is always weak. Sheridan's is always on the offensive. We do not now speak of Sheridan's raids. which, although conducted in the most masterly manner, are subordinate in DAVIS, GREEN & CO., character to other plans and usually seak to Wholesale Shoe Dealers, Main street, Louisville. character to other plans, and usually seek to elude the enemy. But no; in his grand HART & MAPOTHER, tactics, as displayed at Winchester, Cedar Creek and Five Forks, we observe a principle which finds its expression in the following order of attack: He organizes his army into three divisions-two strong parallel CAPT. When the battle rages in front, so that his foe is fully engaged, his reserve, moving by the flank, C. M. METCALF, usually the right, makes a double file around MOSES' improved Pantoscopic upon the flank and rear of the earnestly employed enemy, and rolls him upon the center. Just such were the tactics of Dessaix and Kellerman, chanical and philosophical to be at Marengo. The former moved his six thoufound in no other Spectacles offered sand infantry, by the main road, upon General Zach's triumphant advance from Alexandria, while the latter, moving by the right, made a Moses' improved Spectacles not double left turn upon Pilatti's Austrian horse, only give clear and distinct vision, and won the day. Sheridan's invariable success, do not weary or fatigue the eye, but valor with which he always imbues his troops, then, has been due to the great earnestness and tend to strengthen and preserve the and then to his tactics of two columns and a flanking reserve .- United States Service Maga-
